To whom it may concern.

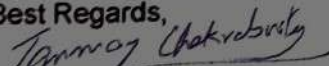

Writing the letter of recommendation for Aishwarya Bhargava is a welcome opportunity to reminisce about her astounding performance and contributions at the Enterprise Asset Management Department of Utopia Global Inc. (Prometheus Group Company). To give you a quick idea of her brilliance, let me tell you that during her 18-month engagement with us, from January 2020 to July 2021, she went from EAM Intern to FTE as Mentee EAM and finally got promoted to RPA Developer. It is a sign of her capability to master the learning curve rapidly. From the time she joined the company, she had always surprised me with her coding skills that went beyond expectations and thus bringing in more value for the company and the client in a short time. Her expertise with complex subjects like UiPath and Robotic Process Automation Technology knowledge is commendable.

Her disciplined work ethic enables her to further her technical skills. Since Aishwarya understands that upskilling skills can become stagnant, I have always found her updating herself on the current trends in technology and the direction in which the industry is evolving. With such deliberate observation skills, it is no wonder that she seldom needs supervision on her tasks. Many of her projects are solo projects which she executed in record time without zero bugs and build errors. Moreover, noticing trends before they became mainstream made her a quick learner who could become comfortable with technologies more quickly than her peers. Within months of joining, Aishwarya had begun designing end-to-end automations, sometimes spending up to 16 hours in the office, which saved the company many person-hours, going on to win two SPOT of the Month Awards during her tenure.

I would also like to mention that, while absorbing new information was easy for her, she did not keep all the acquired knowledge to herself. She valued collaboration and team spirit and believed in crisply communicating her ideas or exceptions without being vague. Doing that allowed her to build trusting professional ties with teammates. While her technical expertise garnered respect, her people skills invited camaraderie among co-workers.

Aishwarya is one of the best employees I have had the chance to work with. She possesses many of the traits desired of a thorough professional. She has inherent talent that she polishes with determined work, develops and maintains professional bonds, takes accountability for delivering a project on time, and looks for new avenues to refine her knowledge. I recognize and admire the effort she plans to invest in continuous learning and evolving her knowledge. Hence, I recommend her for her application. She is pretty deserving and will do your organization full justice.

Best Regards,

Tanmay Chakraborty
